Bente Kahan

Actress/Musician/Director/Playwright

The Norwegian born Jewish actress, musician, director and playwright Bente Kahan received her formal training in performing arts in Tel-Aviv and New York and has been working as a concert and stage artist since 1981. She began her career with a leading part at Habima, Israel's national theatre, and continued later to perform on stages including "Nationaltheatret", Oslo, in the Norwegian national theatre. She performed Yiddish songs and stories early on in her career and since 1986 she started to appear in her own monodramas co-authored with the Norwegian stage director Ellen Foyn Bruun. The production company "Teater Dybbuk – Oslo" was founded by her in 1990, with the aim to present European Jewish culture and history through theatre and music. In 2005 she created the Center for Jewish Culture and Education at the historic White Stork Synagogue in Wroclaw. The following year she established the Bente Kahan Foundation, which became responsible for the culture center and the restoration of the synagogue. As a director of Wroclaw's Center for Jewish Culture and Education, she has produced exhibitions and concerts, as well as theatre plays, many of them written and directed by her and performed by Polish artists. Bente Kahan is still performs internationally and has received many prestigious Polish and German awards for her work in Poland, and in 2017 became the Honorary Citizen of Wroclaw.
